02 WHO do we help?

Where do people contact us from?

18% of helpline users last year were Londoners

Londoners = 14% of the population of England, Scotland and Wales (2022)

Protected characteristics and vulnerabilities

- 83% of helpline users last year were women (previous two years: 84% and 85%)
- 86% of our helpline users were aged 25-44 peak child-rearing years (previous two years: 83% and 84%)
- 18% were from a minority ethnic background (previous two years: 19%; England, Scotland and Wales: 18%)
- 17% were living with a disability/long-term health condition (previous two years: 14% and 17%)*

19% of helpline users were single parents

(previously 22%; UKwide, 15% of families are lone-parent families)

02 WHO do we help? workingfamilies.org.uk

^{*} Disabled people are underrepresented among our helpline users because they are less likely to be working, and most of our helpline users are in work. In the UK, 30% of people live with one or more long-term health conditions. 24% of the UK population had a disability in 2022-2023. There is overlap between the two.

Compared to 21% of UK households with children, of helpline users were living in relative poverty* despite working

Almost two thirds (65%) of helpline users were estimated to be from households earning below the IMINIMUM

Income
Standard (IMIS)

2 3

In the UK, ~49% of children live in households with income below the Minimum Income Standard.

^{*} The threshold for living in relative poverty is earning ≤60% of median income for the year in question. For 2024-2025, this figure was just over £30,000 for couple households with two children, and just under for single-parent households with two children. (Leeds Observatory)

^{} The MIS defines the income needed by different household types to achieve a socially acceptable standard of living. MIS benchmarking is updated each year by Loughborough University in partnership with the Joseph Rowntree Foundation. In 2024, the team redeveloped household budgets from scratch for the first time since the MIS's introduction in 2008: MIS thresholds increased significantly. We calculated our MIS thresholds using the online MIS calculator, for four household types, all with two children: couples in and outside of London, and single parents in and outside of London. Our 65% figure is an estimate.

WHO is using our website?

- 62% of website visitors were female and 38% were male*
- The majority were aged 25-44*
- 27% were from a minority ethnic background
- 28% were living with a disability and/or long-term health condition

HOW are they finding us?

- More than double the number of users were looking at our site on a smartphone/ portable device than on a desktop/laptop*
- Two thirds of visitors found us via an internet search, with most via Google*
- 5 out of the top 10 Google searches by which users get to our website were about working under protest letters*

43% were living in relative poverty

were earning below the Minimum Income

Least access to justice

- met our definition of having least access to justice (we give more time and extended support to these clients);
- presented with a complex query or cluster problem that couldn't be resolved via our website alone;
- were in receipt of in-work benefits; and/or
- had household income below £50,000

AIVIARA's story/Part

For four years, I've worked for the same employer with flexible arrangements that allowed me to care for my neurodivergent daughter. As a single mother, I relied on my guaranteed full-time weekday hours with fixed shifts to manage my caring responsibilities.

When my daughter settled into her new SEN school, I asked my employer if I could go full-time. I had the option to buy our rented home – something I'd been working towards to provide stability and financial security – and the increased income would help with securing and affording a mortgage. My employer seemed supportive.

Shortly afterwards, I was asked to sign a contract variation which I thought reflected my request. I work on the railways, and when asked to attend the office, I find the environment intimidating. I'm also neuro-divergent, which my employer knew, so trusting them and feeling under pressure, I signed what I thought formalised our discussion.

A few days later, I realised I'd actually signed a zero-hours arrangement – no guaranteed hours, income or security. I felt extremely anxious. When I asked to revert to my previous contract, explaining this wasn't what I'd asked for, my employer refused. I then raised a grievance which was also refused.

AIVIARA's story/Part

I felt so stressed, panicking about how I'd provide for my disabled daughter or buy our home with no guaranteed income.

I looked for help, starting with my union, but my rep was unsupportive. I had a free half-hour with a solicitor, who told me to quit my job. Everywhere else, I was told I "didn't meet the criteria" for free legal support, or had to pay — which was financially impossible for me.

Through an online search, I found and contacted Working Families. An employment solicitor got back to me quickly, calling instead of emailing because I'd explained I'm neuro-divergent and this was my communication preference. She was kind, friendly and reassuring.

She reviewed my work correspondence and explained how a work contract isn't always confined to what's written on paper. She helped me understand that the way I'd been treated potentially amounted to indirect sex discrimination and/or disability discrimination. I wanted to keep my job, so we planned to appeal the grievance decision.

My adviser went above and beyond, putting together an appeal pack — I was blown away by the detail, yet it was written in a way I could understand. She'd drafted my appeal document and given detailed advice on handling the process. I immediately felt more informed and confident, knowing I had a clear path to follow.

04 The DIFFERENCE we make

Our theory of change

Working Families has a theory of change. This maps out the social change Working Families is trying to achieve and the steps along the way.

Our helpline sits within this roadmap, with its own target outcomes.

Measuring the helpline's outcomes helps us know if we're effectively achieving what we set out to.

MEASUREMENT

- 1. Do Legal Advice Service users better understand their rights?
- 2. Do they plan/go on to use their rights?
- 3. Does this help resolve their issues?

OUTCOMES

Parents and carers are informed and empowered to make use of their employment rights and entitlements to enter, progress and thrive in work

GOAL

Parents and carers access, progress and thrive in work, while meeting their caring responsibilities

INFORMED

I know where I stand when it comes to being treated less favourably/discriminated against whilst on maternity leave.

You gave me a very clear understanding of my rights around flexible working requests.

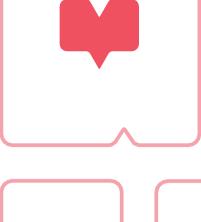

You gave me clarity on my rights and my employer was in the wrong and I was not asking for something reassured me that unreasonable.

I was more informed to negotiate with management.

You have equipped me with the information I need to proceed through this claim against my workplace who have treated me unfairly throughout my pregnancy and maternity leave.

I know what I am entitled to and I understand the next step.

Your advice helped me understand my rights and make a more informed decision about my future.

workingfamilies.org.uk

EMPOWERED

Your advice meant I could challenge my employer's decisions.

Referring to points from acts meant
I sounded more professional and gave me a leg to stand on.

I felt more secure in decisions I was making for my family.

I feel more confident in how to present my case.

I feel more confident navigating the benefits system.

I feel empowered to have conversations with my employer knowing I have the information I need.

I came away feeling empowered and confident to continue to raise my concerns and challenge my employer until I'd exhausted all internal processes.

Your advice gave me so much confidence.

I felt more confident because I knew my rights.

Your advice gave me the confidence to speak to my manager about how my diagnosis impacted my plans to return to work and to discuss my options.

RESOLVED

I've kept my role and avoided a tribunal.

My flexible working arrangement has been approved, and I feel more secure in my job. This has also meant my child can attend nursery four days per week instead of five, which has given us more financial security.

I have successfully navigated a grievance at work and was able to keep my flexible working request. Working a four-day week offers stability for my family.

Your advice made my partner and I feel less stressed. We found out what our rights were in terms of claiming adoption pay and shared parental pay. My partner and I have both been able to take paid time off work while adopting our daughter. This has made a huge difference to us all during the settling-in time. Your advice and resources were invaluable – clear and understandable.

I feel less stressed
as I was able to discuss my options with my employer as per your advice, which meant I was able to keep my role in the business.

Your thorough advice provided a clear route of options. My husband's flexible working request was accepted, which meant I could return to work full-time. (His employer had assumed that I wouldn't/shouldn't be returning to work full-time so had declined his informal request.) This has helped hugely with our income and the time we get to spend with our son.

RESOLVED

Childcare is more affordable and I am able to go back to work after my maternity leave.

Before I contacted Working Families, I wouldn't have been able to go back to work.

I was able to obtain a larger settlement that meant I can now focus my time on my baby.

I kept my job during maternity leave.

My income is secure and is not going to be taken away.

I was allowed enough parental leave to meet the needs of my disabled child.

Your advice helped me to gain flexible working to support my son's transition to primary school. Without your advice, I would have had to give up my job.

My work wanted me to start at 08:00, which I couldn't do because of childcare opening times. Thanks to your advice, I negotiated an 08:30 start.

l've been able to progress my career and balance my family life better.

Applying for flexible working as a man was challenging and looked upon negatively by my employer. I successfully appealed against my employer's refusal of my flexible working request, and can now spend more time with my young children and do nursery drop-offs/pick-ups. I'm less stressed.

RESOLVED: BENEFITS

- 100% of service users receiving benefits advice said they better understood their entitlements
- 85% acted on our advice
- Nearly two thirds increased their household income
- 43% told us they increased their household income by a specific amount: an average of £4,592/year
- Our advisers calculated benefits gains of over £90,000

I understand the system much better now.

This outcome really helps with my mental and physical health.

You really helped me when I faced the most difficult time.
Working Families
was a godsend.

I feel less stressed.

My mental health has never been better.

You've been a lifeline for me at a terribly difficult time in my life.

The whole process is a lot less stressful.

Without
Working Families,
I would have been completely lost.

WELLBEING

When we first spoke I was panicking, feeling stressed and anxious. You put things in perspective, made me feel calm and my situation manageable.

79% of helpline users said it's easier to balance work and family and/or their family financial situation has improved as a result of Working Families*

THE IMOST HELPFUL ADVICE

Working Families
helped explain I was 'in the right' better than any other support organisation, enabling me to communicate my position very clearly to my employer.

Yours was by far the best support I received when it came to understanding my rights.

No one else, including our employers, knew what we were entitled to, and everything else I read online was very confusing.

Families' advice was far better than [other well-known advice organisations].

Your excellent service was so helpful when I couldn't get clear information from other sources.

WEBSITE FEEDBACK

Your online resources were amazing – they explained things really clearly.
We used the letters when contacting our employers about leave.

Your website is great and provides lots of helpful information for confused parents.

Spotlight on our WEBSITE

This is the clearest information I have read on the subject of flexible working requests for parents/carers. It avoids jargon or having to follow links to gov.uk about employment law (which can be difficult to understand for the layperson). It also gives helpful suggestions for how to go about parts of the process in an amicable way with your employer, which I haven't found on other sites. Thank you for the article – I feel more confident in what I can do now.

Your really thorough links to additional resources I could

email included

quote to my employer.

Excellent online resources.

This description of shared parental leave is the best I've read so far.

The information on the website was extremely helpful and informative, resulting in a positive and satisfactory outcome.

I was struggling to find the correct info on the government website and this has really reassured me. It's very clear, succinct and easy to understand.

I'm very grateful for the information shared here as I was worried about returning to work when my twins are still under one year old, but this article has really given me perspectives I didn't know were possible by law.

LEARNING and IMPROVEMENT

We're always striving to make our Legal Advice Service even better, and strengthening how we record, analyse and act on our data is key to this. In 2024-2025, we ...

analysed our helpline phone data to work out when demand was highest. We knew we weren't answering as many calls as we wanted to, but wanted to increase capacity in a targeted, efficient way. We increased adviser capacity on the phone by only three hours per week, at the busiest times and ...

We grew the percentage of unique callers getting through to an adviser from a low of just ~40% a few years ago, to 89% by the end of 2024-2025.

- enhanced monitoring of least access to justice among service users by including known low income/receipt of benefits alongside our formal definition
- clearly defined complex queries as those our website can't resolve and began consistent monitoring of these
- adapted our website feedback form to capture nuanced reasons for our web pages not helping, including 'the law doesn't help me' and 'the benefits system is too complex'

LEARNING and IMPROVEMENT workingfamilies.org.uk

We are continually adapting. All feedback received is reviewed quickly and acted on (where appropriate) by our head of legal advice, ensuring that our helpline is shaped by the people who use it.

LEARNING and IMPROVEMENT

We're working on further improvements to our monitoring and evaluation. Putting together this deep dive – our richest yet – has helped us identify gaps and where we can tighten our data capture.

 Our helpline contact form wasn't accurately capturing caring responsibilities for a disabled child/adult family member. Parents typically selected only 'parent', missing additional caring roles. We've adapted our contact form to more precisely capture carer status.

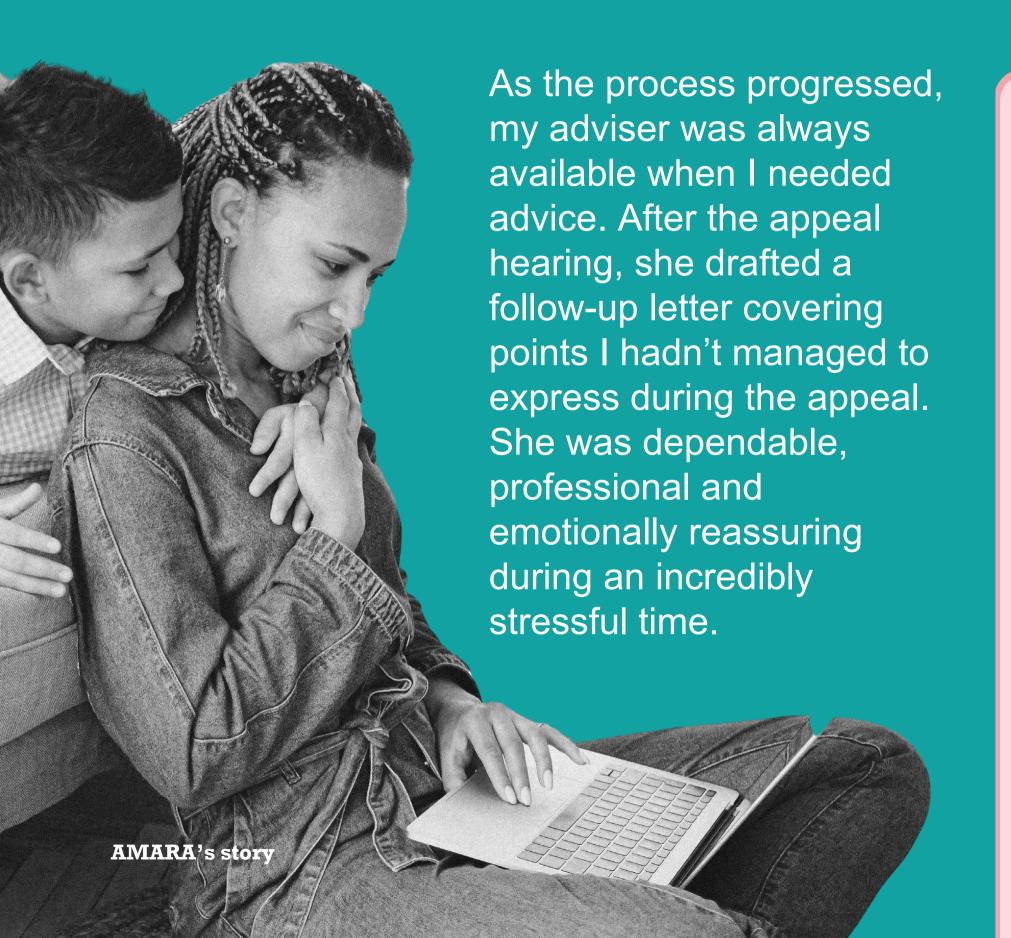

- We've been under-recording financial outcomes by only capturing calculated unclaimed benefits or confirmed settlements. Supporting someone to keep their job or increase working days through flexible working requests are also financial outcomes.
 We're developing ways to quantify and capture these broader financial outcomes.
- Having established successful longterm outcomes data collection from helpline users, we're in the early stages of applying a similar approach to track website visitors' eventual outcomes.

AIVIAIRA's story/Part

Thanks to Working Families' support, I secured exactly what I'd originally requested: a full-time contract with fixed, guaranteed weekday hours. I feel so relieved. I'm financially secure and have a much better work-life balance that allows me to properly care for and enjoy quality time with my disabled daughter. I can finally move forward with buying our home.

From the beginning, I felt well supported. The lines of communication were always open and I never felt alone. My adviser was patient and compassionate, showing genuine empathy throughout. I honestly don't know what I would have done without Working Families' support; it's been life-changing.

LAS data deep dive 2024-2025

Working Families' free Legal Advice Service was established in 1999. Our team of specialist employment solicitors and experienced advisers empower working parents and carers with a clear understanding of their employment rights and the strategies and confidence to resolve unreasonable and/or unjust treatment at work. We prioritise a de-escalatory approach, helping people with caring responsibilities to remain in work wherever possible and appropriate.

We also have a dedicated benefits adviser, who advises on in-work benefits, financial support, and help with childcare costs.

Our Legal Advice Service has been continuously Advice Quality Standard accredited for over 20 years and is a London Legal Support Trust Centre of Excellence.
